A CORRESPONDENT at Saig on, writing to this journal at the time of the publication there fthe decrees reducing the number and emoluarranged under one Alphabet in the strictest | ments of officials, remarked that it meant the bankrupter of the colony. His words seem to be coming true in part, for Saigon'is re-engraved in a superior style and brought up at present passing through a crisis in which a number of tradeamen are coming to grief. The Saigon Republicain of the 22nd July says that failure follows failure, and in the Journal Official are invariably to be found extracts from Court judgments announcing new disasters. A string of hulf-a-dezen names of French atorekeepers are given as baving recently become bankrupt, and in the succeeding issue of the paper, in which the same subject is treated of, it is stated that the Chinese tradesmen are following suit. Such a state of things, says our contemporary, became inevitable from the day the famous Etionne decrees were published. Well established merchanta have been able to wenther the storm, but ose who have only recently commenced billipess, or whose capital is small, bave gone down before it. The official now has great difficulty, says the Saigen Republicain, in making both ends meet; he buys as little as possible, pays badly or not at all, not withstanding good intentions, and having commercial or political relations with the drawn by the local writer as to the lamentable condition of the official is probably somewhat exaggerated, but it was inevitable that the dismussal of a large number of functionaries and the reduction of the emoluments of the remainder should be severely felt by the tradespeople, whose business consists chiefly in catering for the officials, who are the most numerous section of the European community. The sufferers are no doubt deserving of sympathy, but it cannot be contended that it is the duty of the state to maintain useless officials in order that these may support the stores.

Saigon is suffering, however, from a more serious mayter than the dismissal of a number of functionaries and the bankruptcy of a few tradesmen. The foreign trade of the colony is being undermined and ruined by the new Customs tariff. Of late years, and especially since 1884, says the Saigon Republicain, trade had been prosperous: business without being brilliant, was active, and tion against the P. & O. In the official report upon Russian statistics for 1885 it is mentioned that in that year the population amounted to 109,000,000; that the birth rate exceeded the death rate by 900,000 s year, and that of 853,000 young men sligible that year for military service, only 228,000 were enrolled. It was at the Institute of Technology a few days before the close of the term. One of the Professors had been troubled by hearing some of the students indulging in slang. Accordingly, when his class had assembled to hear his lecture, he gave them a ton-minute discourse on-the use I slang, told them how it was corrupting the language, and that its use was, among persons of cultivation and refinement, a sure sign of ill-breeding. Then he want on with his regular lecture, and at the close called the attention of the class to the fact that some of them had been ramiss in their studies, and that it behaved them to make up for lost time, or they would fail to pass the approaching examinations. "The fact is," he concluded, "you've got to brace up or you'll get left." which shows that preaching and practice are often wide apart.

Signor Vallo of Philadelphia says that the singing voice is contracting—that is, that the extreme high female voice (seprano) and the low one (contracto) have been for some time running into the middle voice (mezzo-soprano), while the deep basso and high tenor have been running into the baritone. So we have now, he claims, really but two voices-baritone and mezzosoprano-giving a range of only three cotaves and a third for the general voice. Formerly we had, he says, six voices—basso, baritone, tenor, contracto, mezzo-soprano, and soprano-giving, in all, a compass of four octaves and a third. From this it will be seen that the Professor holds that his voices have contracted into two baritone and mezzo-soprano. If composers have not already made a note of this, he says, they should do so and compose accordingly.

IMPERIAL QUARTO. DINGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN

n Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been and at Vancouver with San Francisco by the compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance Through Passage Tickets granted to Eng. of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are these Notes. Chinese and English type correspond in the size crossed to a Bunk.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration:-Chalmers Vocabulary contains about 16,000 sent to the Company's Offices addressed to Mr. Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English D. E. Brown, District Freight Agent, Van. and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the should be marked to address in full; and the student of this difficult language absolutely resame will be received by us until 5 P.M. the quires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which day previous to sailing.

For information as to Passage or Freight, have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as the Post in Tine are requested to have them > pages enables a person who understands English as round ones to be bulged in.

> to communicate effectively with natives who a by 3 by 14 inches is suggested as a good understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect size. TRUNNER & Co., 60. PATERNOSTER ROW. DAILY PRESS" OFFICE, WYNDHAM ST. CHAPTER V.

THE SQUIRE EXPLAINS THE POSITION. "I don't know what is coming to this country, I really don't; and that's a fact," said the Squire to his companion, after they had walked some paces in silonce. " Here is this form, the Mont Furm. It fetched twenty-five shillings an acre when I was a young man, and eight years ago it used to fotch thirty-five. Now I have reduced it and reduced it to fifteen, just in order to keep the tenant. And what is the end of it? Janter -he's the tenant—gave notice last Michaelmas but that stupid owl, George, said it was all no thing, and that he would continue at fifteen shillings when the time came. And now tonight he comes to me with a face as long as a yard-arm, and says that Janter won't keep it at any price, and that he does not know where he is to find another tenant, not he. It's quite heartbreaking, that's what it is. Three hundred acres of good, sound, food-producing land, and no tenant for it at fifteen shillings an acre.

What am I to do ?" "Can't you take it in hand and farm it yourself ?" asked tlarold.

"How can I take it in hand? I have one farm of a hundred and fifty acres in hand as it is. Do you know what it would cost to take over that farm," and he stopped in his walk and struck his stick into the ground, "Ten pounds an acre, every farthing of it-and say a thonsand for the covenants-about four thousand pounds in all. Now, where am I to get four thousand pounds to speculate with in that way, for it is a speculation, and one which I am too old to look after myself, even if I had the knowledge. Well, there you are, and now I'll good night, sir. Its getting chilly, and I have felt my chest for the last year or two. By the way. I suppose I shall see you to morrow at this tennis party of Ida's. It's all very well for Ida think of such things with all this worry on my hands. Well, good night, Colonel Quaritch good night," and he turned and walked away through the moonlight.

Harold Quariteh watched him go and then stalked off home, reflecting, not without sadness. upon the drama which was opening up before him, that most common of dramas in these days of depression, the break up of an ancient family through causes beyond control. It required far less acomen and knowledge of the world than he possessed to make it clear to him that the old race of de la Molle was on its last legs. This story of farms thrown up and money not forthcoming pointed its own moral, and a sad one it was. Even Ida's almost childish excitement about the legend of the buried treasure showed him how present to her mind must be the necessity of money; and he fell to thinking how pleasant it would be to be able to play the part of the Fairy Prince and step in with untold wealth between her and the ruin which threatened her family. How well that grand looking open-minded old Squire would become a great station, fitted as he was by nature, descent, and tradition, to play the solid part of an English gentleman of the good old fashioned kind. It was pitiful to think of a man of his stamp, forced by the vile exigencies of a narrow purse, to scheme and fight against the advancing tide of destitution. And Ida, too-Ida, who was equipped with every attribute that can make wealth and power what they should be-a frame to show off her worth and state. Well, it was the way of the world, and he could not mend it; but it was with a bitter sense of the unfitness of things that he, with some little difficulty—for he was not yet fully accustomed to its twists and turns-found his way past the swelling heap of Dead Man's Mount and round the house to his own front door.

He entered the house, and having told Mrs. Jobson that she could go to bed, sat down to smoke and think. Harold Quaritch was, like many solitary men, a great smoker, and never did he feel the need of the consolation of tobacco more than he did this night. A few months ago, when he had retired from the army he Molebill, and live the quiet, somewhat aimless ! for he was a great reader, especially of scientific works, would, he thought, keep him employed, seeing that in addition to reading he was a thorough sportsman, and an ardent, though owing to the smallness of his means necessarily not a very extensive, collector of curiosities, and more particularly of coins.

At first, after he had come to his decision, a feeling of infinite rest and satisfaction had taken possession of him. The struggle of life was over for him. No longer would he be obliged to think. and contrive, and toil; henceforth his days would slope gently down towards the inevitable end. Trouble lay in the past, now rest and rest alone awaited him, rest that would gradually grow deeper and deeper as the swift yours rolled by, till it was swallowed up in that almighty Peace, to which, being a simple and religious man, he had looked forward from childhood as the end

And so our hero had already begun to find out. Here, before he had been forty-eight hours in Honham, a fresh cause of troubling had arisen. He had seen Ida de la Molle again, and after an interval of between five and six years had found her face yet more charming than he had before. In short he had fallen in love with it, and being a Stay, I will just write him a note: liy the way, you would like a glass of wine, wouldn't you, George. Nonsenso, man, here it is in the cupboard, a glass of wine is a good friend to have handy sometimes." George, who like most men of his stamp, could put away his share of liquor and feel thankful for it, drank his glass of wine while Mr. Quest was engaged in writing his note, wondering meanwhile what made the lawyer so civil to him. For George did not like Mr. Quest. Indeed, it would not be much to say that he hated him. But this was a too much afraid of the man for that, and in his queer way too much devoted to the old Squire's interests to run the risk of imperilling them by the exhibition of any aversion to Mr. Quest. He knew more of his master's affairs than anybody living, unless it was perhaps, Mr. Quest himself, and was aware that the lawyer held the | (destince specialement aux pays hors d'Europe, old gentleman in a bondage that could not be composée de HUIT PAGES GRAND FORMAT, resubroken.
